

From studies, it would appear that BPL will cause significant radio interference to the public. I feel that this technology should not be used since cable modem and DSL technologies are now available readily in most areas. In those areas not served by DSL, wireless networks with single point transmitters can fill the service areas.

Thank you.